An Intercultural Conversation on Autism Spectrum

Editors
Elizabeth Rein • Claire Ross

Cultural Mind and Society
Commentary: Words, Voice, Silence

Chapter 8

Today, I find myself drawn more to words and less in sensations.

And sometimes I lose something that I’m trying to hold again (Elizabeth).

Feminist
So do I, now. I've been focusing on chores and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment. Sometimes, there was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone.

I've been focusing on chores and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone. Here was nourishment or chaos, and they have eaten the phone.